

CAN YOU SEE YOURSELF CAPTURING THE STORIES THAT HELP PAINT A PICTURE OF WHAT IS HAPPENING IN OUR COMMUNITY...

...and contribute to making change?

WE ARE INVITING INTERESTED COMMUNITY MEMBERS TO BECOME COMMUNITY KNOWLEDGE COLLECTORS.

What is a Community Knowledge Collector?

A Community Knowledge Collector is a person who takes an interest in their community, the opportunities, and challenges it faces.

They will then help collect information and stories from the community as part of understanding the impact of an issue on the community.

This knowledge is then brought together with other information to shape community action.

To help those who wish to be a Community Knowledge Collector, Burnie Works has teamed up with UTAS so that Community Knowledge Collectors receive the best training and support.

Community Knowledge Collectors will receive a fully subsidised training course, and there will be opportunities for Community Knowledge Collectors to work with Burnie Works and be reimbursed.

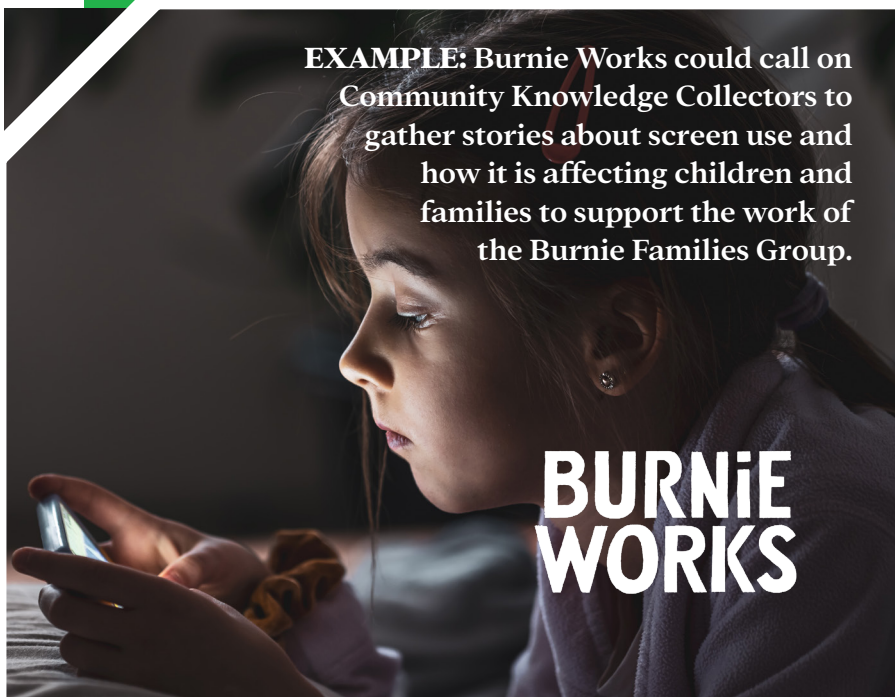

Why does Burnie Works want Community Knowledge Collectors?

We believe that community knowledge can be used to inform and effect positive collective impact.

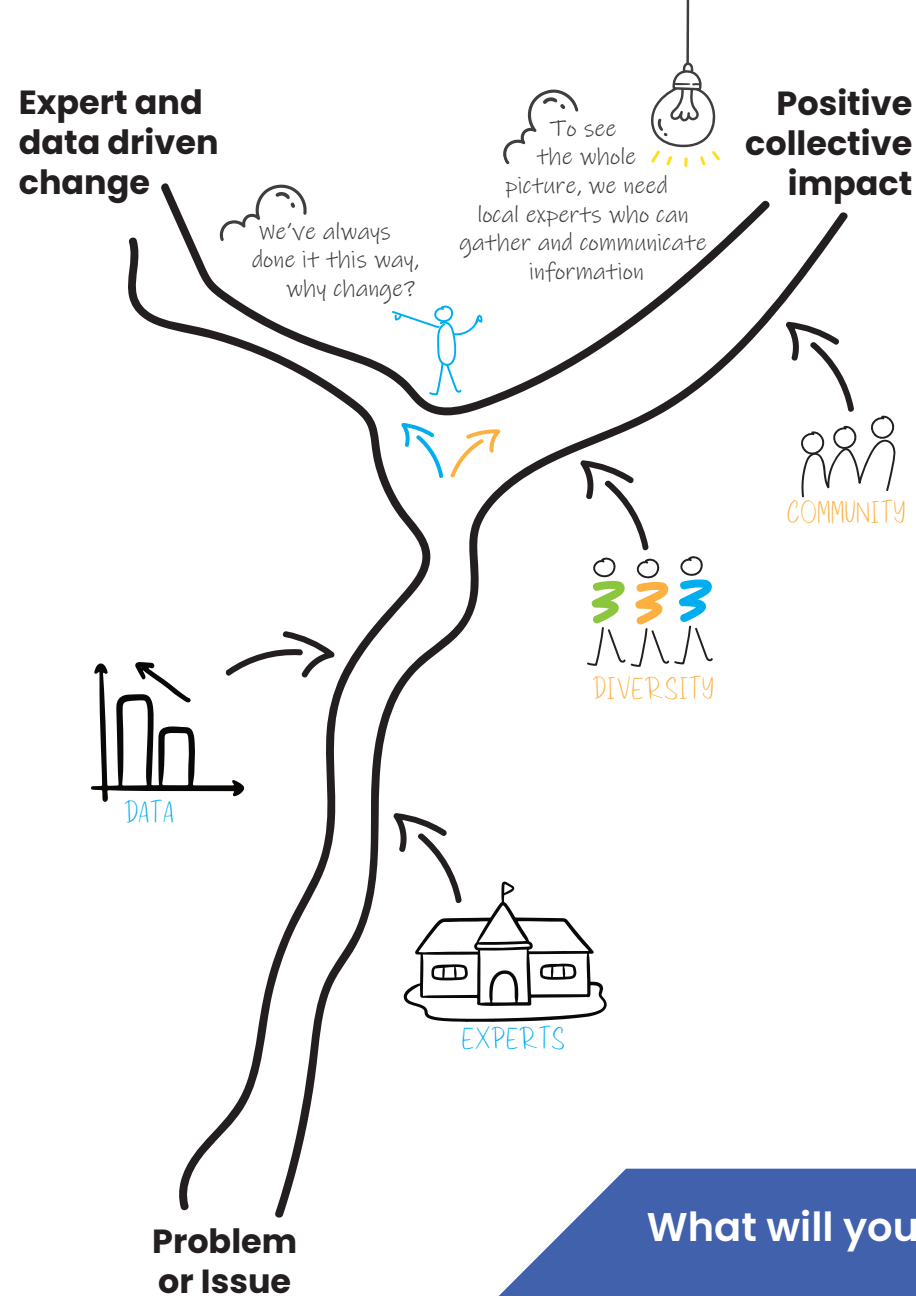

At the moment, systems change relies on external experts and data. We want to bring community into that mix!

We hope to build a team of local Community Knowledge Collectors who are skilled and supported, to work with Burnie Works, to gather and communicate information.

EXAMPLE: Burnie Works could call on Community Knowledge Collectors to gather stories about screen use and how it is affecting children and families to support the work of the Burnie Families Group.

WITH LOCAL INSIGHT, LOCAL KNOWLEDGE,
AND LOCAL ACTION,
BURNIE WORKS

To be a good
Community Knowledge
Collector, you will have:

- An interest in your local community
- An interest in learning about the opportunities and challenges that face your community
- A desire to contribute to collective change
- The ability to communicate local knowledge and stories
- The commitment to completing the UTAS course and put those skills to work within Burnie Works activities

What will you get out of the program?

- The fully subsidised micro-credential course, equal to one credit toward further tertiary study (UTAS courses)
- There will be opportunities for Community Knowledge Collectors to work with Burnie Works and be reimbursed
- Learn with like-minded people, in a supportive environment with your very own coach
- Participants will learn practical skills and knowledge to:
 - Develop an understanding of our communities to inform effective knowledge collection.
 - Develop the tools and confidence to investigate, recognise and identify the types of community information.
 - Develop an understanding on how community knowledge and information can be organised collectively to amplify impact.

Burnie Works and UTAS are delivering the Community Knowledge Collector Project as part of the Australian Governments Stronger Places, Stronger People initiative. The Program consists of a unit of study (120 hours of learning), which will be delivered over 3 teaching blocks between October 22 and July 23. The Program will consist of a series of in person workshops, virtual and fully online learning. Each (in person) workshop will be 4 hours, and virtual sessions will be 1.5 / 2.5 hours each. Online learning will provide an opportunity to learn at your own pace and will be accessible across the full program (October 2022 to July 2023).
